Virginia Tourist Trade Up

Richmond, July 10.—In all sections of the Old Dominion there are to be found many luxury and enthusiastic visitors vacationing in and touring through the State. A report from the hotels and tourist camps shows a marked increase in numbers for 1935 over 1934, and from all indications and available information the traveling public are rapidly becoming Virginia-conscious.

The State Commission on Conservation and Development, through its Tourist Bureau recently established at 1100 North Main St., has been distributing over 70,000 copies of literature on Virginia during the months of April, May and June, and the results of much of the distribution of these publications will not be realized until the fall, at which season of the year Virginia is most beautiful and which has heretofore been the time that the greater number of people visit the state.

The Commission is now planning its fall advertising, which will be carried in many of the leading magazines and metropolitan newspapers, and is destined to attract many thousands of tourists to the State.
